What is a cookie

Cookies are a tool used by Web servers to store and recover information about their visitors. It is a unique identifier in the shape of a text file which is sent to the user's device to register information, thereby allowing the improved quality and security of the website. Cookies have an expiry date, from which time they cease to be in operation.

Cookies utility on my website

We use cookies to facilitate website navigation and to obtain greater efficiency and personalisation of the services we offer. The cookies used will only be associated to an anonymous User and their device will not provide any reference which will allow us to access your personal data nor to introduce a virus. The implanted cookies cannot be read on your device by other servers.

The information that we analyse through cookies is the address of the internet protocol (IP) used to connect your computer to the internet, the type and version of navigator used, the operating system and platform used to connect, and the date and time of this activity.

Types of cookies

Alongside with log cookies that identify a registered user and indicate the time you logged into the portal, we use other cookies you consented:

Analysis cookies: the cookies processed by us or by third parties that allow us quantify the number of users and perform the measurement and statistical analysis of use of the service put on offer. For this purpose user browsing on our website is analyzed in order to improve the supply of products or services that we offer.

Advertising cookies: those are the cookies, processed by us or by third parties, that allow us manage in the most effective way possible the offer of advertising spaces on the website, tailoring ad content to the content of the requested service or use they make of our website. So we can analyze your browsing habits on the Internet and we can show you the ads related to your navigation profile.
